Introduction

Public pressure, politics, regulation, technology and organizational management, shortage of workplace talent, low demand and sustainable business making are making mining operations very difficult even if there is market. The mining operations in India are seized with high public pressure of giving free services, jobs, access to the facilities etc. This has been also been complicated by the local politics. On the other hand, the pressure of regulatory compliance is growing with more regulatory requirements.

All the above require new understanding and skills. It is in this context, the Department of Mining Engineering has decided to organize a short course that will discuss these aspects in great details. The topics that will be covered are:

1. Modern regulations of environment and safety.
2. Job Contracting.
3. Mine Developer and Operators (MDOs)
4. New Technology
5. Cost reduction.
6. Market –based Mine Planning.
7. Knowledge archival and data base management, data analytics.
8. Talent and human resources management.
9. Mine Financing Methods.
10. Negotiating Skills.
11. Managing New Opportunities.
12. Renewable Resources

Course Materials

The course material will contain compilations of all the important global developments in the areas of modern mining, its challenges and solutions apart from the lecture materials. The lecture materials will be given in CDs and via emails.
